Nearly overnight, COVID-19 closures created huge disruptions in our workplaces and local food chain in 2020. Unemployment soared and hundreds of thousands of pounds of locally grown food that had been slated for area restaurants, schools and other food service industries suddenly had nowhere to go. Area food banks, with funding from the federal, state and local governments, stepped up to buy as much local produce as possible, making it available to food insecure families, and are continuing to offer locally grown food through 2022. Please contact these organizations if you need assistance, or consider sending them a donation to help keep locally grown produce in our food banks!

When the Farm to Families (F2F) project, a collaboration between REAP and Roots4Change (R4C), ended in May 2021, we continued nurturing our relationship through the summer program Verano en Familia (a family summer). This program included community-grounded activities that were co-planned with R4C to advance the wellness of Latinx/Indigenous families, centering the importance of local food, healthy eating, and lifestyle, while respecting and honoring families’ cultural backgrounds. These outdoor events educate families about the importance of sourcing food that is both locally grown and produced in an environmentally responsible manner. Using our food truck and ingredients directly purchased from different farms around Dane County, we provided families with fresh, healthy snacks, had fun showing kids how to make smoothies and fresh salsa using the blender bikes, and showcased cooking demonstrations alongside R4C’s promotoras. In addition to the parks events, Latinx/Indigenous families enjoyed tours to Moonwise Herbs Farm in Edgerton and to Tortilleria Zepeda, Lone Rock.

On October 19th, 2021, REAP collaborated with Wisconsin Bike Fed, Dream Bikes, and Down With Bikes in the event Safe Routes to School where kids and adults prepared fresh salsa using REAP’s bike blenders. A healthy snack of apples from Door Creek Orchard farms accompanied.
(RE)IMAGINING:

Community food solutions from leaders on the ground

REAP’s mission of transforming communities through the power of good food has evolved in the last few years to better reflect our intention to be a strong food equity ally. We have started to reach out and listen to the voices of those in our community that have been historically left out of the conversation, meeting them as partners and as the experts they are in their own food access solutions.

Thanks to the ingenuity of our partners at R4C and funding from a Wisconsin Partnership Program Grant, the idea of creating a community advisory group was born. The newly formed Affinity Group Advisory Committee can bridge our work as advocates of food system work and the food justice issues that disproportionately affect communities of color in Dane County. After much planning, in October 2021, seven community members representing farmers, consumers, entrepreneurs, and educators met. We posed a question and listened:

“If you could build a dream community food system today, what would it look like for you?”

• CONNECTIONS “We need to know who and where [Latinx] farmers and manufacturers are. Having a way to connect and collaborate with each other would promote “reciprocity” among producers.”

• MARKET RESEARCH “We want to know where the main produce (raw materials) comes from and how they are produced. We need to know what products are needed/wanted by consumers (demand).”

• SCHOOL LUNCH “School lunch should incorporate other foods and can be an opportunity to teach about different foods consumed by different cultures”

• EDUCATION IN FOODWAYS “We want to educate our community about healthy food and traditional eating habits.”

• ENTREPRENEUR TRAINING “We need help to navigate the system to establish a farm/business and to know the different funding opportunities available for producers as well as help to market our products”

ADVISORY BOARD MEMBER SPOTLIGHT

Tortilleria Zepeda • Lone Rock, WI • tortilleriazepeda@gmail.com • tortilleriazepeda.com

Mexico native and former marine biologist Julian Zepeda met his wife, Heidi, in Mexico in 2013. The two soon moved to Heidi’s home near Spring Green, WI. Quickly recognizing the lack of authentic, high quality corn tortillas in their new home, the duo decided to produce their own. Since 2018, Tortilleria Zepeda has sourced locally grown, non-GMO corn and employed the pre-hispanic nixtamalization process to yield authentic, nutritious, artisan corn tortillas.

Cesar’s Cheese • Plain, WI • hbarrad96@aol.com

Oaxaca native and UW-Madison Master Cheese Program grad Cesar Luis and his wife Heydi began their cheese operation in 2008 with the release of Queso Oaxaca. They hand stretch the mozzarella-like cheese into 15 pound, 50 foot ropes, then cut into retail-ready sticks.

Victor’s Garden • Stoughton, WI • vortega91367@gmail.com

Victor has been growing and selling chemical-free crops for the past 10 years. This includes beets, beans, broccoli, cauliflower, cabbage, corn, cucumbers, eggplant, garlic, kale, lettuce, onions, peppers, tomatoes, radishes, and Mexican herbs. Reach out if you’d like Victor’s Garden to supply your restaurant or home.

WAYS TO SELL

Directly to REAP
Do you have a larger volume than you can sell through your CSA or farmers market? Let us know. REAP purchases vegetables and other products from our Atlas partners for our Farm to School programs, holiday fundraiser boxes and more. Contact info@reapfoodgroup.org.

Farm to Restaurants
All of the restaurants and local businesses who are Atlas members are committed to buying and serving local foods in their establishments. If you’re looking for new markets or have a great new product, don’t hesitate to reach out to them. If you’re selling local produce to a restaurant that isn’t an Atlas member, encourage them to sign up and promote their support for local farmers!

Farm to Institutions
Looking for even larger markets? Join REAP in strengthening the local supply chain by selling to institutions, such as schools, hospitals, corporate campuses, prisons, and county meal programs. REAP is investing in new technology, building resources for technical support for both farmers and institutional buyers, and researching the feasibility of a vegetable processing facility to supply institutions with locally grown, minimally processed fruits and vegetables. Contact REAP Farm to Business Director Anna Landmark at annal@reapfoodgroup.org for more information.
Towns with farmers’ markets are underlined on the farms and producers map on pages 24-25.

Troy Farm
Do you grow juicy cherry tomatoes, sweet snack peppers or bright red beets? Let us know! REAP Food Group provides a Farm to School Snack once per week through the Madison Metropolitan School District (MMSD) Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Program.

Throughout the school year, REAP purchases on average 650 lbs. of produce weekly from farms and producers within 150 miles of Madison, and is always on the lookout for more sources of local ingredients.

Are you interested in having your Wisconsin-grown produce and products on the menu for students throughout Southern Wisconsin?

Whether you have fresh fruits and vegetables or local meat or dairy, REAP can help make introductions, help farmers know and meet the needs of schools, and provide schools with resources to use local products within their different meal and snack programs. Reach out to learn more!

Produce typical of the REAP Farm to School Snack is included below, but REAP is also eager to learn about other or new varieties or products. Are you interested in the program but don’t quite grow in the volume for the REAP Farm to School Snack Program? Please don’t let the volume deter you from reaching out, as REAP may be able to combine your produce with another supplier. Reach out to REAP Food Group (info@reapfoodgroup.org) or Allison Pfaff Harris, REAP Farm to School Director (allisonph@reapfoodgroup.org) to learn more.
